North by Northwest

A northern Italian chef brings fresh flavors to Eugene BY VANESSA SALVIA

When a man grows up in Italy fishing for octopus and has a tattoo of an octopus on his arm, you can be pretty sure that he knows how to cook an octopus. At Noli Italian restaurant in Eugene, you won't ever see chef and owner Davide Mulone (DAH-vee-day) serving fried calamari. "I never like fried calamari," he says. "Where I come from, calamari is grilled. We do nice calamari here, quick on a flat-top with a little olive oil."

You also won't find such Americanized dishes as chicken parmesan or alfredo. "People sometimes come in here and get upset that we don't have those because they think that's Italian, which it's not," he says. "People come here because it's simple; it's fresh."

There's much more that chef Mulone takes from his Italian upbringing. His father owned and operated a small restaurant in Genoa, which was very similar to the one Mulone now operates at Noli, which opened as an eatery in Fifth Street Public Market in 2008. In October 2012, Mulone and his wife, Maggie McDonald, moved to a small restaurant space in the Whiteaker neighborhood formerly occupied by Nib.

His lease at 5th Street was up for renewal, and though he says he loved being a part of the food court there and had a nice relationship with the market, it wasn't where he wanted to be for another 5-year period.

"My wife found this on Craigslist and she told me right away," Mulone says of the newer location. "I came in and I just fell in love with it. It was summer and the little patio was beautiful, the door was open ..."

He's lost in thought for a moment, summoning the view of his father's restaurant in his mind's eye. The restaurant was on the first floor and the family's living space was upstairs, just like here. "My dad had a restaurant in Italy and it was the same size with the patio and everything," he recalls. "We live upstairs here. It reminded me a lot of where I grew up. It was the perfect size; it was just too perfect of a place, exactly the same thing as where I grew up."

After the move, Mulone adapted his menu, keeping some family recipes and adding some more adventurous things that the business lunch crowd at 5th Street wasn't terribly receptive to, such as risotto with squid ink. "You do a risotto or a pasta and you just take the black ink and squeeze it in," he says. "It's unbelievable. It has almost the taste of the ocean. That's something that I grew up with. I tried it at the market and people were like, 'Uh, what is that?' so here I can introduce some things like that."

What won't change is his family recipe for lasagna, layered with Bolognese sauce, béchamel and ricotta, or the recipe for tiramisu, made the way his mother taught him — ladyfinger cookies topped with real Mascarpone cheese doused with amaretto liquor. There's a drizzle of chocolate and dusting of cocoa, just enough to allow the individual flavors to shine through, with no soggy mushing together.

His chef's gnocchi comes paired with a meat sauce Mulone's father created, which combines creamy Bolognese sauce made with beef and pork ragu with basil pesto. "It's a family recipe that was a mistake," Mulone laughs. "My dad made it of sauces when he ran out and it turned out to be one of the best sauces he ever made."

The new summer menu features fresh, seasonal vegetarian options, such as grilled portobello mushrooms, zucchini, asparagus, bell pepper and polenta with taleggio cheese topped with arugula and roasted eggplant pesto. The focaccia bread is house-made, and the bowl of marinated cocktail olives offers tastes from Mulone's hometown.

"The olives are all from where I'm from," he says. "It's a nice menu and the prices are very reasonable for what we do here."

With the exception of grilled rosemary pork chops with Lyonnaise potatoes ($17) and the spaghetti with sautéed mussels, shrimp, calamari, scallops and peas in a white wine tomato sauce ($20), every entrée on the menu is $15 or less. In addition to the perennially popular tiramisu, Mulone offers panna cotta and fresh berry crostata, utilizing our area's delicious summer fruits.

Mulone says he's quite happy in his new space, though sometimes he thinks about having an even smaller place, perhaps a surprising goal for such an accomplished restaurateur. Noli can seat 30 indoors, plus another 14 when the patio is open.

On weekends, Mulone turns over all of the tables two or three times per night. Yet he dreams of a 20-seat restaurant open four nights a week where he can operate much like a private chef, cooking what's fresh right in front of his guests.

"I see a lot of people in my experience getting bigger, bigger, bigger," he says. "Getting bigger doesn't mean you get better. When you get bigger you lose control of the hands-on. That's why I have this restaurant; I want to be hands-on. I take one night a week off and I'm here all the time and I think that's the only way to do it." ■

Noli Ristorante Italiano is open 5 to 9 pm Monday through Thursday and 5 to 9:30 pm Friday and Saturday at 769 Monroe St.; 844-1663; noliitaliancafe.com.

An Indian Lunch

Leela's Kitchen offers Springfield diners a healthy option BY SHANNON FINNELL

LEELA NELAPUDI

Leela Nelapudi has always loved making delicious meals. "I cook every day," she says. "I love trying flavors, and I always cook healthy."

That passion is now blossoming in the commercial kitchen space at Sprout! in Springfield. Every weekday from 11:30 am to 1:30 pm, as well as during the 3 to 7 pm Friday Sprout! farmers market, Nelapudi serves up plates of Indian food that are healthy, vegetarian and delicious.

"I had an interest for a few years," she says, adding that the former owner of Evergreen Indian Restaurant, a friend, used to try to tempt her to work there. "They moved out of town, and I thought, 'My kids are all grown, and I don't have anything much to do, so maybe I can try something out,'" Nelapudi explains. "I happened to look on Craigslist and found Sprout! Kitchen."

In addition to its farmers market, Sprout! has a mission to help small food businesses get off the ground. Nelapudi cooks in a section of the 3,000-square-foot commercial kitchen, making meals that vary slightly every day. "The basic food is rice and dahl, which is curried lentils, and yogurt salad," she says. "Those two things are always there, but the vegetable changes every day." And the list of veggies is long: eggplant, okra, asparagus, spinach, potatoes, cauliflower and cabbage, just for starters.

"I always had a desire to provide a healthy option for people eating out — and a different flavor that's not American," Nelapudi says. She cooks with a mix of homemade spices, primarily made of red chili peppers, cumin, coriander, mustard and turmeric. "It's from the state where I'm from, Andhra Pradesh," she says. "It's very authentic to my little area there." ■

Check out Leela's Kitchen 11:30 am to 1:30 pm Monday through Friday as well as during the 3 to 7 pm Friday Sprout! farmers market, 418 A St., Springfield; 228-8327.

Rib-Off!

An exploration of Eugene's bony meat

BY SARAH DECKER

Driving up Willamette the other day, I was greeted at the corner of 18th Avenue by the unmistakable smell of smoked meat. Now that the BBQ King has moved into a brick-and-mortar location, painting the intersection with the glorious aroma of his creations, it's got me thinking about ribs. And once you get ribs on your mind, there's really only one way to remedy that: a good old-fashioned rib-off!

BBQ by Tony

630 Garfield St.: These ribs are huge. They have a noticeable smoky flavor topped with a tangy sauce (I opted for sweet, but you could also choose spicy). Nothing overpowers the meat, letting the pig do most of the talking.

Papa's Soul Kitchen

400 Blair Blvd.: Papa's Soul, in the heart of the Whit, is the place I think of when I think barbecue. The ribs are deliciously smoky and the sauce is hands-down the best barbecue sauce I've come across, sweet and tangy with just the right amount of spice.

The Smoking Pig BBQ

2260 W. 18th Ave.: Their sign says it all: 'The Place for Ribs.' And I'm going to hand it to this oft-forgotten, off-the-beaten-path gem — they're right. The meat literally fell off the bone as I tore into them. Delicate and smoky, these ribs didn't really need the sauce, but I tried it out any way: one sweet, one spicy, both delicious.

Bill & Tim's BBQ

201 E. 13th Ave.: The latest endeavor for the Westraunts, these ribs were a more dry variety. The sauce is unique and flavorful. The meat doesn't retain much smoky flavor, but the sauce balances it all out.

BBQ King

1810 Willamette St.: These ribs are as good as they've always been. Nicely sized, they are flakey, moist, smoky and just the slightest bit spicy. On the day I arrived to pick them up, they were already sold out, so go early.

Tacos, Tacos, Tacos

Mountains of Mexican food at Tacovore BY SHANNON FINNELL

ine up! In its first few weeks, Tacovore, the new taquería at 5th and Blair, has already attracted quite the following with its menu of tacos, tortas, desserts and drinks.

“I felt like Eugene needed another place that was a quick-service restaurant that served relatively healthy food in a fun environment,” says owner Steve Mertz, longtime general manager of Laughing Planet.

Mertz says that people on the West Coast seem to have a special affinity for Mexican food, especially tacos. “But I think that where a lot of Mexican-based eateries fall short is that they don’t worry about the quality of their core ingredients,” he continues. “There’s a lot of great tasting taquerías here, but you kind of know what you’re getting when you spend a dollar for a taco.”

At Tacovore, it costs $2.50-$3.50 per taco. The menu balances different diet preferences — in addition to meat options like grilled chicken, carnitas and carne asada, there are gluten-free, paleo-friendly, vegan and vegetarian options, such as crispy tofu, bean and cheese and mushroom tacos. Tortas include carne asada, carnitas, eggplant and grilled chicken. A flourless chocolate cake and a margarita flan are on the menu for dessert.

Mertz says he was lucky to hire Tacovore’s head chef, Gabriel Gil, who diners may remember from Soubise, Rabbit and Red Agave. “That was not planned whatsoever,” Mertz says. “Actually, Gabriel lives across the street from me, and I’ve known him

When Mertz began remodeling the building, formerly home to the Pizza Research Institute, Gil offered to consult on the project, and after Soubise closed, Mertz hired Gil, bar manager Amy Hand and some of Soubise’s staff.

Hand’s influence on Tacovore is already evident — Mertz says they’ve worked to perfect a margarita recipe that’s getting rave reviews. “I was going to start with a little more simplified bar program, but Amy convinced me that we could make it a little bit more fun,” he adds.

Like most brand new restaurants, Mertz says Tacovore is still refining its systems and putting some finishing touches on the space. He’s planning to add colorful art on the walls. While the primary menu is pretty much set for a while, “I have plenty of room on the wall for special boards, and I plan on using the wall space for that,” Mertz says. “We want to be able to switch it up with the seasons.”

And then there’s the matter of the unused space that PRI utilized as an entryway. Mertz says that it won’t necessarily be part of Tacovore, and for now he’s keeping his plans a secret. “I have a couple of different options,” he says. “I’m going to keep the space myself, and I’m trying to determine exactly what is the best need for the neighborhood — not necessarily for me but what the neighborhood needs.”

Tacovore is open 11 am to 10 pm every day at 530 Blair Blvd., tacovorepnw.com.

The founders of Membrillo Latin Café want people to know that their style of Latin food goes far beyond the shores of Cuba — that its flavors transcend borders and continents.

“A lot of people are comparing us to classic or traditional Cuban restaurants from Miami or Tampa,” says Corey Wisun, who, with his business and life partner Sarah Foottit, runs the café located on the corner of Park Street and 8th Avenue. “I wanted to keep it a little more broad and open.”

And that’s why, since May 4, Eugene now has a Latin-inspired café that, in addition to featuring a variety of authentic Cuban dishes, pays homage to Spain, Argentina, Peru and many other countries while also promoting local, sustainable practices.

“Essentially we’re giving some props to South America and really staying away from the Central American stuff like tacos, burritos, quesadillas,” Wisun says.

At Membrillo you can get a classic grilled and pressed Cubano with pulled pork, ham, Swiss cheese, mustard, pickles — or dishes like parrillada mixta, which consists of grilled beef short ribs and chicken wings with black beans, yellow rice, salad and chimichurri.

Or if those sound too filling, there’s the plantanos maduros: sweet fried plantains with honey and vanilla salt.

Many of the dishes rely on staple ingredients like beans, rice, bell peppers, onions and plantains, and also mojo, a classic marinade made up of sour oranges, lime, garlic, oregano and cumin.

“There’s a lot of flavor but not a lot of spice,” Wisun says, something that, he adds, applies to Cuban and Latin food in general.

The meals at Membrillo are served in the Spanish tapas style, with many small dishes combined to make a meal.

Don’t, however, expect to get comfortable with a set menu. The folks at Membrillo want customers to encounter a fluid, ever-changing culinary experience.

“I like doing chalkboard-style menus that constantly change,” Wisun says. “It allows us the creativity to have some fun.”

And because it’s located across the street from the Lane County Farmers Market, most of the ingredients used at Membrillo are purchased within sight of the restaurant. “Our proteins are local, sustainably raised, our produce primarily local and organic, everything we do is scratch-made,” Wisun says.

The chow at Membrillo draws on Wisun’s childhood in Florida, where Latin cuisine abounds, and he wanted to bring these unique flavors and dishes to Eugene.

After several years working at various restaurants around town, most recently Falling Sky Delicatessen, Wisun decided it was time to open his own joint, resulting in Membrillo, an 18-seat restaurant with a full bar.

Eugene is no stranger to trendy and eclectic culinary endeavors, and Wisun and Foottit want to add even more diversity. “I’m not trying to rewrite any book,” Wisun says. “I’m taking the flavors of my childhood, the stuff I grew up on, and I’m trying to offer it to folks.” ■

Tour de France

Marché's French Regional Dinners thrive after 16 years

STORY AND ILLUSTRATION BY ALEX NOTMAN

Sitting in a booth at Marché, my fiancé and I admire the etchings above our table. Each one features a different food-smith, a sort of lineup of French food superheros: There's the Beurière, or buttermaid, outfitted with a dress made of pails, measuring slabs of butter on a scale; the Poissonnière (a fishmaid) wearing a crab headpiece and a gown covered in fish; and of course the Vinaigrier (a vinegar maker) carrying barrels of vinegar while sporting mustard-box pantaloons. These 17th-century prints are as au courant as ever — not much surpasses the pursuit of la vie gastronomique in France.

We've come to Marché this evening for the French Regional Dinner series, which features a different region of France on the last Wednesday of every month, a tradition founding chef and owner Stephanie Pearl Kimmel started in the '80s at the Excelsior Café before bringing it to Marché in 1998.

"They're educational and fun for our guests (and staff), providing a taste tour of another culture," Kimmel writes via email from her Nyons "fixer-upper flat" in the southeast corner of France.

Kimmel's love of France is infused into all her endeavors — Marché, Le Bar, Provisions, Route 5. The love affair began when Kimmel was 17 and first visited Paris; she soon returned to study at the Sorbonne.

"I developed a huge admiration for the French approach to food — it's such a part of life," she says. "The insistence on the best products and knowing their origin, the respect for seasons, its traditional meals and the emphasis on gorgeous representation."

A respect for the seasons was at the heart of planning menus, matching regional specialties of France with what's in season in Oregon. That evening, May 28, we gorged ourselves on the flavors of the Rhône Valley, beginning with an amuse-bouche of brochette de foie de canard — a duck liver brochette with bacon and sage — a bite of creamy, salty goodness, balanced by a glass of dry Côtes-du-Rhône blanc.

The following four courses, all with recommended wine pairings, included a beet tartare with chopped egg, a choice of pan-roasted sole or roasted leg of lamb, a Reblochon cheese plate and finally the crème renversée au coulis de fraise — a vanilla custard drizzled with strawberry sauce — one of the best desserts I've tasted in Eugene.

"The most wonderful and amazing thing is how in sync our Culinary Tour de France is with the ingredients that are at their peak in our own region," Kimmel says. "For example, we feature Provence in August when our tomatoes, eggplants and peppers are at their glorious best, but we do Normandy and Brittany with their shellfish and apples and cider in January when our oysters, mussels and crab are sweet and plentiful."

The next French dinner, on June 28, will feature the bounty of Languedoc-Roussillon, a southern region of France that borders Spain; think Basque country. The menu includes salty cod, grilled zucchini with Roquefort cheese and a fish and shellfish stew over saffron rice.

Kimmel says the menus are extremely loyal to each region, and from my own experience, I find that to be true. Ten years ago I spent a month up the hillside from Ventajou, a tiny town in Languedoc-Roussillon. I was there on a volunteer program to rebuild a medieval chapel and, after long days of slinging mortar, the townspeople delivered meals of fresh shellfish and veggies, served with saffron rice — a sort of French paella. You could taste the ocean. Ventajou is the same distance that Eugene is from the ocean. Can you already taste that salty, salty sea? ■

Meet Me On The Mountaintop At Maru

Asian fusion is on fire with Japanese- and Korean-influenced sushi, tapas and barbecue BY SARAH HAGY

The top of the mountain — the summit — as well as a circle representing wealth and success are a couple of the cultural connotations restaurant owner Alex Han drew upon when naming his new Asian fusion restaurant. The word “Maru” means mountaintop in Japanese, but it’s also known colloquially to represent money because the Chinese character of the word is circular.

Maru opened its doors about six months ago with clean white platters of sushi and steaming bowls of Korean and Japanese cuisine.

Don’t be fooled by the unremarkable exterior set back from the road. With just one step inside you’ll see there is nothing nondescript about Maru. Large windows light the spacious front dining area, secluded booths are set back under low-hanging lamps, there’s intimate seating for private parties up by the sushi bar and even a lounge downstairs.

Warm earth tones, painted brick, dark wood paneling, soft-colored lighting and big TVs throughout play a part in setting the mood. Han, who also owns Izumi Sushi & Grill, Pho the Good Times Asian Bistro and Peachwave, knew what he was doing when he separated the large venue space into different sections, each with its own ambiance.

“Our goal is to be a place where everyone can come and have a great time,” says general manager Dennis Borchers. “We really want to be a fun place that has something for everyone.” Maru embraces this ideology with a wide variety of menu items, from sushi to hot and cold tapas as well as meat-lover, vegetarian, vegan and gluten-free options.

Borchers says the dol-sot bibimbap, an entree with veggies and meat over rice topped with an egg and served in a steaming hot stone bowl, is the most popular dish. Or, if you’re looking for spice, Borchers recommends his favorite, the yukgaejang, which is a kind of super stew with vegetables, beef, brisket and a delicious flavor.

The tapas are most popular with groups who order several and try a little taste of everything, particularly the deep-fried gyoza, either vegetarian or pork, with dipping sauce.

Located across from Matthew Knight Arena, Maru draws students and professors as well as other locals. Borchers says they are still building a base clientele, and he predicts they will be where they want to be in six months.

For now, Borchers says he takes pride each time a new customer decides to come back and becomes a regular. “Our number-one goal is to give great food and great service. If we do those two things our customers will keep coming back,” Borchers says. “I am always thinking of ways to improve, to do things better and try new things. As a new restaurant we are still evolving and we are always trying to get better.”

Head sushi chef Truman Ducker, who has been making sushi for six years, creates new, surprising sushi rolls regularly for the specials menu. When you think of sushi, tropical fruit rarely comes to mind, but last week the special was a Hawaiian roll with real crab, cucumber, mango, fresh tuna, yellow tail and garlic aioli sauce.

Sammy Yoshida, one of the sushi chefs who has been with Maru since the beginning, explains, “A lot of our rolls are innovative, but also derived from traditional sushi making, and fusion is the creative part.” Yoshida says their goal is to make sushi that tastes good, looks good and is sometimes a little bit surprising, like their Burrito Roll.

Maru knows how to play to its audience with both a Phill So Good Roll and an Olympic Torch Roll that shouts Nike-loving Track Town USA. They don’t miss a beat with the college kids either, offering both an Ex-Boyfriend Roll and an Ex-Girlfriend Roll. But watch out, the Ex-Girlfriend is all spice. ■

Maru Asian Tapas Bar & Lounge is open 11 am to 10 pm Sunday through Thursday and 11 am to midnight Friday and Saturday, with happy hour specials from 3 to 6 pm and 9 pm to close at 1796 Franklin Blvd., to-go and delivery available. Chocolate Chia Pudding

BY BEVERLY LYNN BENNETT, AUTHOR OF CHIA: USING THE ANCIENT SUPERFOOD

Eugene chef Beverly Lynn Bennett has authored several cookbooks, but it was this dessert that kickstarted her most recent publication, Chia: Using the Ancient Superfood. Since 2005 Bennett, who has been a vegan for 26 years, has published eight books, including four for the "Complete Idiot's Guide" series. She writes a monthly dairy-free dessert column for VegNews magazine, and one of those columns contained her recipe for chia pudding. It was that recipe that caught the eye of a publisher based on The Farm in Summertown, Tennessee, known for publishing vegetarian and vegan cookbooks and health and wellness books.

Bennett says this chia pudding can be enjoyed any time of day, as a dessert, a snack or even for breakfast. If chocolate for breakfast isn't your thing, it's flexible. Try making it with any flavor of non-dairy milk that you like, such as mint, vanilla, strawberry, green tea, pumpkin spice or eggnog. Make it with cow's milk, if you wish.

Chef Bennett says this recipe holds up really well, making it great to take to that next vegan potluck, and it can be made in larger amounts than she suggests in the book — use a quart of non-dairy milk instead of just 2 cups, for instance. "It's really easy to make," she says, "and it's really filling and so yummy!"

Yield: 2 cups, 4 servings

2 cups chocolate non-dairy milk such as almond milk, soy milk or coconut milk beverage
2 tablespoons agave nectar
1/2 teaspoon agave nectar
1/3 cup chia seeds
Topping options: cacao nibs, coarsely chopped nuts, unsweetened shredded dried coconut, sliced strawberries or red raspberries

Put the non-dairy milk, agave nectar and vanilla extract in a medium bowl and whisk until well combined. Add the chia seeds and whisk until well combined. Let thicken for 10 minutes. Whisk the mixture again to break up any clumps of chia seeds.

Put the mixture in the refrigerator until the chia seeds swell and thicken the mixture to a pudding like consistency, about 1 hour.

Evenly divide the pudding among four bowls. Serve immediately or refrigerate. Garnish with one or more of the topping options as desired.

Chocolate-Mint or Carob Chia Pudding: Replace the chocolate non-dairy milk with chocolate-mint or carob non-dairy milk.

Vanilla Chia Pudding: Replace the chocolate non-dairy milk with vanilla non-dairy milk and add an additional 1/2 teaspoon of vanilla extract.

Strawberry Banana Smoothie

FROM DUCK BROTHERS CAFÉ

When the opportunity arrived for Troy Attebury and his wife, Kathy Thomas, to take over the existing coffee shop at 12th and Ferry in Eugene near campus, they jumped on it. What was the former Ferry Street Café is now Duck Brothers Café, thanks to an inspiring encounter with two mallard ducks on the McKenzie River and the idea for an homage to both the University of Oregon Ducks and the Blues Brothers.

Attebury took over last April, and he replaced some of the bistro seating with large cushy couches. "I wanted it to be more homey," he says. He also observed large groups of students coming in for study sessions and shoving the tables together. He solved that problem by replacing a couple of the smaller tables with a large kitchen table, so the groups now have room to sprawl.

He's also fond of setting out plates of fresh fruit, such as pineapple, for customers to snack on. His menu features delicious muffins paninis, deli sandwiches and pastries. Attebury wants you to "have it your way," so he offers numerous customization options. The menu makes it clear that substitutions are A-OK. You get your choice of dairy or non-dairy options for the coffee, and cheese, spreads and bread for the sandwiches. Menu items and their names were inspired by a visit Attebury took to New York City.

A thorough menu of specialty coffee drinks contains such favorites as the Vanilla Love with white chocolate, vanilla and strawberry, or the Mounds, with coconut and chocolate. A perennial favorite here is the "Reimagined Red Bull," with your choice of syrup flavor added to the drink, or even a Red Bull Smoothie, when you really need that jolt along with a taste of fruit.

Most other nearby coffee shops close at 6 pm, but Duck Brothers is open until 7 pm for that last hit of caffeine for the evening's studying. Attebury's smoothie recipe is "not the norm," he says, "but it tastes really good and I like to do things that are a little different."

16 ounces crushed ice
1/3 cup Torani strawberry banana smoothie mix
1/4 cup half and half (hey, he never said it was healthy!)
1 tablespoon Stasero vanilla topping powder
whipped cream for topping

Place all ingredients in blender. Blend 15 seconds (or more, depending on the power of your blender) until the mixture is thick and creamy. Scoop into a cup and top with whipped cream.

Pulled Pork

FROM WHIRLED PIES

Pizza places featuring barbecued chicken pizza on the menu are a dime a dozen. But as delicious as that is, Whirled Pies does not approach pizza in the most traditional way. "I wanted something more unique than barbecue chicken," says Eowyn Bondurant, one of three owners of the popular Monroe Street eatery, along with Laurel Bui and Kaj Kaldahl. The Monroe Street pie features savory pulled pork, red onion, pineapple and cilantro.

The restaurant offers bicycle delivery, which numerous nearby residents take advantage of, though on occasion it does take some time for it to arrive. And it truly is a family affair — Bui and Bondurant grew up together as childhood friends in Astoria; Bondurant and Kaldahl are partners with three kids; Bui has two kids, and they all work at the restaurant in some capacity.

Don't expect to see much Whirled Pies advertising. One of their philosophies is to use their money for supporting other local businesses and donating to charity. "We buy local," says Bondurant. "And our advertising budget is donations to kids sports teams, gay rights, bicycle rights and other local causes," Kaldahl says.

For Bondurant and Bui, owning a restaurant has been a long-term goal since Bondurant first began attending culinary school. They started out with a fish taco food booth, but Bondurant determined that pizza could meet all of her culinary goals: fresh food featuring local produce, meat and seafood and homemade ingredients. "You can put anything on a pie," enthuses Bondurant. "We make everything ourselves. I wanted to make all of the sauces, we caramelize our own onions, we make our own sausage ... anything that we can make ourselves we make ourselves." Happy hour, from 3 to 6 pm each day, is a good time to pop in for a $1 cheese slice with the option of adding toppings for 25 cents.

6 pounds pork butt
4 cups ketchup
1/2 cup apple cider vinegar
1/2 cup water
1 large chopped onion
12 cloves garlic, chopped
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

Place all ingredients in a crockpot and cook on high for about 10 hours. If it needs to cook longer, cook on low.

Green Sauce for Burritos

FROM FRESH AND NATURAL

When you're hungry for a healthy, flavorful meal washed down with an aqua fresca or fruit smoothie followed by a sweet tidbit of some sort, there's one place you can go to satisfy all of your desires. In the storefront formerly occupied by the Divine Cupcake on West 11th Avenue are Fresh and Natural and Juvenal's Mexican Bakery (pronounced Hoo-ven-all). The two businesses share the kitchen, which means you get to choose from Juvenal Martinez's delicious pastries or Erendiro Moreno's Mexican plates or sandwiches.

This green sauce is, like the name of the restaurant, fresh and natural. It's also simple yet flavorful and a bit spicier than the red sauce. The wet burrito comes loaded with chicken, steak, pork or veggies along with rice, beans, tomato, cilantro, onions and chips on the side.

Moreno and her husband have operated the Fresh and Natural eatery in the Gateway Mall since 2003. Moreno, or "Ere" as she is affectionately known, is from Acapulco and has been a Springfield resident for 20 years. The couple's cooking utilizes whole foods prepared from scratch. Their smoothies are among the most popular offerings there, especially the Back to Life smoothie, Moreno says. "That's made with orange juice, spinach, pineapple, celery and sprouts," she explains. "It's very healthy and delicious."

The art of making pastry caught hold in Mexico during the brief French occupation of the 19th century, which left behind a taste for delicious baked goods. When bakeries began to sprout throughout Mexico, skilled bakers would take the techniques of the French and adapt them, adding new names and creative shapes.

Juvenal Martinez learned the baking trade from working in a bakery in Mexico City many years ago. He began by selling his pastries to friends, who kept asking for "more and more," says his wife, Rosario Martinez. "People always wanted more of his cakes and pastries," she says. "They are very good. When you try them you will know why."

3 pounds tomatillos
1 large onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic
1/2 pound fresh Serrano chilies
small amount of chicken broth, as needed

To prepare tomatillos, place them in a bowl of cold water to loosen the husks. Peel off the husks. Rinse and drain the tomatillos.

Place all ingredients in a large pot and add enough water just to cover. Bring to a boil and then gently simmer until the tomatillos are soft, about 30 minutes.

Allow to cool enough to handle. Transfer ingredients to a blender and puree until smooth. Add chicken broth one teaspoon at a time and blend in until the sauce is the consistency you like. Salt to taste.
